Labor Day Recap
Michael Christensen, LAWA Deputy Executive Director

Michael Christensen updated the Council on the flight and booking activity at LAX. Although activity for August and September were 61% below flight and bookings of the same period in 2019, levels are trending up from our lowest level of 94% down at the beginning of COVID. The Transportation Security Administration (TSA) measured significant activity during the Labor Day weekend. TSA processed 39,443 passengers on Friday and 35,676 on Monday (60% of the 2019 passenger count). Traffic in the Central Terminal Area (CTA) increased to 46,000 compared to last year’s peak of 100,000 vehicles. LAX-it activity also increased during this period.

Getting Passengers Back/Touchless Experience
Michael Christensen, LAWA Deputy Executive Director

LAWA continues to look for different ways to clean and sanitize terminal areas and to move forward with touchless opportunities.

- Hourly cleaning and wiping down of high-touch areas
- Restrooms continue to open.
- Hand sanitizing stations will continue to be added throughout the terminals with a goal of 400.
- Plexi Shields are up at the ticket counters and another 800 installed by LAWA throughout the airport.
- Continue ultraviolet technology pilot on escalator and handrails
- Continue search for additional ultraviolet technology options
- TSA is researching security and baggage technologies.

- Ambassadors are currently stationed in TBIT and Terminal 1. Pilot will expand to Terminal 5 – departure level.
- Ambassadors remind guests that face coverings are required.
- Masks are offered to any traveler not wearing a mask.
- Guests are informed of PDE vending machine locations (all terminals except T4 and TBIT).
